Hald & Lie Aviation is pleased to announce its appointment as an official agent of Atitech for the promotion of MRO services to new clients worldwide across both commercial and business aviation sectors.

Founded in 1989 and headquartered in Italy, Atitech stands as the largest independent MRO provider in the EMEA region. Boasting a robust infrastructure, the company operates 12 state-of-the-art hangars across three strategic locations in Naples, Rome, and Olbia. With a workforce of over 1,500 people, Atitech offers an extensive range of services including aircraft base maintenance, painting, engineering services (CAMO PART M, DOA PART 21J), Technical Training PART 147 basic and advanced, and workshop activities including DOA PART 21G.

In addition, Atitech provides customized line maintenance services through a network of 31 outstations—21 in Italy and 10 internationally—ensuring comprehensive support for a diverse fleet.

The recent expansion in Olbia, which features two hangars covering approximately 11,000 sqm, marks a significant milestone. Initially supporting Gulfstream and Hawker business jets, these facilities are slated for further development to accommodate additional aircraft models, reinforcing Atitech's commitment to top-tier business aviation maintenance.

Hald&Lie Aviation, headquartered in Denmark with offices in Italy and the UK, specializes in aircraft brokerage and advisory services within both the commercial and business aviation markets. Leveraging decades of industry experience and a vast global network, H&L provides clients with bespoke, discreet solutions tailored to high-net-worth individuals and airlines alike.

Gianni Lettieri, President and CEO of Atitech, expressed his enthusiasm: "We are delighted to collaborate with Hald & Lie, whose expertise will aid us in connecting with business aviation clients. Their insights will help us to better understand the unique needs and expectations of this segment as we expand our services."
